Why workplace mental health matters

70% of adults will have a mental health issue in their lifetime.¹

Lost earnings per year in the United States due to serious mental illness:²

$193.2 billion

1 million workers miss work every day due to workplace stress.³

1 in 5 adults experience mental health episodes each year.⁴

Defining stress

Stress
/stres/
noun
A state of mental or emotional strain or tension resulting from adverse or very demanding circumstances.

Stressors may stem from:
• External circumstances
• Internal conditions

Long term stress can:
• Increase blood pressure
• Heighten risk of stroke
• Suppress immune function
• Lead to depression
The impact of depression

Depression costs U.S. companies:

• ~5 extra missed work days yearly.
• 11.5 days of lower productivity for each affected employee every 3 months.
• A total of $17 to $44 billion in lost workplace productivity

Studies show that across all health conditions, depression has the biggest overall impact on an individual’s work performance.²

The World Health Organization projects that depression will be the second leading cause of disability throughout the world by 2020.³

GOALS:
• Get to know each other as people, not just as job descriptions.
• Create a culture of well-being.

- Actively promote all available wellness services – flyers, emails, videos, trainings, websites, etc.
- Develop campaigns to encourage co-workers to talk to each other when they see someone might be struggling.
- Encourage leaders to bring up the importance of mental health and wellness in their team meetings.
Maintenance strategies

Crucial conversations
Expect the unexpected, but keep these tips in mind:

- The goal IS NOT to solve their personal problems but IS to connect the individual to the appropriate resource.
- Start by slowing down and acknowledging what they’re going through.
- Be quiet and ask questions.
- IF you must offer advice/suggestions make sure you are getting their permission.
- Show empathy while still discussing their situation, even if the conversation turns to how it will impact the workplace.
- Know when to pick up the phone.
- Follow-up is important. Don’t let the first conversation be the last.
Final thoughts

Remember, it takes courage to speak up about mental health issues. You can empower employees to seek the help they need:

- Reduce the stigma – create a culture of support, acceptance and understanding
